

 Save the date *****

European Webinar on 05.04.2022 from 2-4pm

Look, what's coming in from outside...? Pesticide residues, their consequences for organic agriculture and what needs to change in terms of pesticide regulations

All across Europe, there are pesticides in the air, which unleash their toxic effects on biodiversity and health – in cities as well as in nature reserves and organic fields.

Martin Häusling (MEP) and the Bündnis für eine enkeltaugliche Landwirtschaft hereby cordially invite you to a webinar about pesticides residues, their consequences for humans, nature and organic agriculture as well as the necessary changes that need to be made to the European pesticide approval process.

The discussion will take place on 05.04.2022 from 2-4pm (CET) online and will feature speakers from politics, the organic industry and civil society:

- Andrew Owen-Griffith, EU-Commission: The new EU regulation on sustainable use of pesticides
- Johanna Bär, Bündnis für eine enkeltaugliche Landwirtschaft: Short presentation of the study: “Pesticides and pesticide-related products in ambient air in Germany”
- Stephan Paulke, EgeSun/Producer of organic food products
- Martin Dermine, PAN Europe
- Johannes Heimrath, Bürgerinitiative Landwende (Citizen initiative for an agricultural transformation)

The event will be interpreted into German and English. An official invitation, as well as the full programme will follow shortly.

To register for the webinar: please click here.

Martin Häusling, MEP & Bündnis für enkeltaugliche Landwirtschaft
(literally translated as “Alliance for an agriculture fit for grandchildren“)